Newanforbi v. Amazon.com Services, LLC, et al. (Alameda No. 26CV201554) — Amazon: 14-Day Extension Offer and Settlement Demand

Mr. Frederick:

Thank you for your August 24, 2026 notice of appearance.

Amazon's responsive pleading is due today. The first attachment offers a 14-day extension, through and including September 14, 2026, as to Amazon only. Please confirm by reply e-mail by 5:00 p.m. Pacific Time today. If Amazon has already filed a responsive pleading today, the offer still stands — tell me and I will sign a stipulation taking it off calendar.

The second attachment is my opening demand to settle as to Amazon alone — $250,000.00, matching the Code of Civil Procedure section 425.115 notice already on file as to Amazon — with a response requested by September 11, 2026. It is a compromise communication under Evidence Code section 1152 and Federal Rule of Evidence 408. Section V asks Amazon to produce four items voluntarily and early, before either side spends money on motion practice; I have not framed it as a statutory demand.

I have made Accurate Background the same 14-day offer separately through its counsel, but the two are independent and this demand is directed to Amazon alone.

Please also confirm that you consent to electronic service at this address under Code of Civil Procedure section 1010.6.

Regards,

Brendan Ngehsi Newanforbi
