Plaintiff,

Defendants.

Case No. 5:25-cv-02931-SRM-DTB

Hon. Serena R. Murillo

DEFENDANTS RANDSTAD US, LLC'S AND RANDSTAD NORTH AMERICA, INC.'S NOTICE OF MOTION AND MOTION FOR JUDGMENT ON THE PLEADINGS ON PLAINTIFF'S FIRST AMENDED COMPLAINT

Hearing Date: November 25, 2026
Time: 1:30 p.m.
Dept: Courtroom 5D, 5th Fl
Complaint filed: September 25, 2025
FAC Filed: May 21, 2026
Trial Date: Not Set

TO PLAINTIFF AND ATTORNEYS OF RECORD:

PLEASE TAKE NOTICE that on November 25, 2026 at 1:30 p.m., or as soon thereafter as counsel may be heard, in Courtroom 5D, 5th Floor of the above-entitled Court located at 350 W 1st Street, Los Angeles, CA 90012, Defendants Randstad US, LLC and Randstad North America, Inc. (collectively, "Randstad"), will, and hereby does, move for judgment on the pleadings on Plaintiff's May 21, 2026 First Amended Complaint ("FAC") pursuant to Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 12(c).

This motion for judgment on the pleadings is made on the grounds that, even accepting the FAC's allegations as true, the entire FAC fails to state facts sufficient to constitute causes of action against Randstad, and Randstad is entitled to judgment as a matter of law under Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 12(c). The pleadings are closed: Defendant Hirewell, LLC ("Hirewell") answered the FAC on June 8, 2026 (Doc. 63), Randstad answered the FAC on August 21, 2026, and this motion is brought early enough not to delay trial, no trial date having been set. In particular, Plaintiff has not pleaded facts for his conspiracy and fraud claims with particularity as required by Fed. R. Civ. P. 9(b), his allegations do not constitute a plausible claim, and he fails to plead essential elements of the remaining claims he asserts in the FAC.

Prior to filing this motion, the Parties thoroughly discussed the substance and potential resolution of this motion via videoconference, and Plaintiff indicated he opposes this motion. This motion for judgment on the pleadings is based upon this Notice, the attached Memorandum of Points and Authorities, the Declaration of Nathan D. Chapman, and all records, papers and pleadings on file in this action, such oral argument as the Court may consider at the hearing of this matter, and any matters of which the Court may or must take judicial notice.

MEMORANDUM OF POINTS AND AUTHORITIES

I. INTRODUCTION

Plaintiff Nicholas A. Ventura ("Plaintiff") was allegedly the victim of a job scam, perpetrated by unknown scammers who are not parties to this case, that resulted in him losing tens of thousands of dollars. Critically, Plaintiff acknowledges that Randstad is a "legitimate recruiting firm[]" and that the scammer who contacted him on behalf of the "Fraudulent Actors" was "not employed by, contracted with, or otherwise authorized to represent Randstad." (Doc. 62 ¶ 10–12, 15 (emphasis added).) Despite these admissions, Plaintiff alleges claims for civil conspiracy, fraud, and related and derivative claims against Randstad.

Randstad is entitled to judgment on the pleadings for the simple reason that Plaintiff admits Randstad had nothing to do with the scam at issue. Although Plaintiff alleges that the scammers referenced Randstad's name as part of their deceit, Plaintiff does not allege that Randstad knew about their impersonation or took any other action to give Plaintiff the impression that the scammers were acting on its behalf. Because his theories of vicarious liability fail, and because he has failed to allege plausible facts against Randstad with particularity, his claims fail. For similar reasons discussed in more detail below, Plaintiff's related and derivative claims also fail as a matter of law. Plaintiff's claims fail on multiple independent grounds: he alleges no manifestation by Randstad that could support apparent authority; he alleges no predicate act, enterprise participation, or proximate causation by Randstad under RICO; he was never in privity with Randstad on his securities claim; Randstad owed him no legal duty; several theories rest on criminal statutes affording no private right of action; and his remaining claims are wholly derivative.

The Court should grant this motion, enter judgment on the pleadings in Randstad's favor, and dismiss the FAC with prejudice and without leave to amend, as an amendment would be futile.

II. RELEVANT PROCEDURAL AND FACTUAL BACKGROUND

Plaintiff, who is proceeding pro se, filed a Complaint in the Superior Court of California, County of San Bernardino on September 25, 2025, alleging claims of RICO Conspiracy and Securities Fraud against Defendants based on Plaintiff's allegations that he was the victim of a scam that tricked him into buying and transferring cryptocurrency to unknown third parties, among other allegations. (Doc. 1-1.) Defendants removed, and then-Defendant Korn Ferry moved to dismiss the Complaint for failure to state a claim. (Docs. 1, 3.) The other Defendants, including the Randstad Defendants, joined in Korn Ferry's motion to dismiss. (Doc. 30, 31.) Defendants argued, inter alia, that Plaintiff failed to plead his fraud claims with particularity and that Plaintiff admitted the named Defendants were not involved in the scam at issue and, instead, were unwittingly impersonated by third-party bad actors. (Docs. 3, 36.)

After a hearing, the Court granted Korn Ferry's motion to dismiss and granted Plaintiff leave to amend. (Doc. 60.) Plaintiff filed his First Amended Complaint ("FAC") on May 21, 2026, which makes it even more obvious that Randstad had nothing to do with the scheme at the center of this case.[1] (Doc. 62.) Specifically, Plaintiff alleges that a group of third-party "Fraudulent Actors," spearheaded by third-party "Annie Actor," saw him making public postings about his job-search efforts on LinkedIn and other recruiting platforms, and they began targeting him "for fraudulent schemes purporting to offer employment" by masquerading as "legitimate recruiting firms such as Randstad." (Id. ¶¶ 10–12.) Plaintiff unambiguously concedes that Randstad was not involved in the scam: "Annie Actor was not employed by, contracted with, or otherwise authorized to represent Randstad . . . [and] Annie Actor's invocation of Randstad's name . . . was deliberate, calculated, and designed to exploit the apparent authority and brand recognition of Defendant Randstad to induce Plaintiff's reliance." (Id. ¶ 15 (emphasis added).) Within a couple of days,

[1] The FAC drops the original Complaint's claims against Korn Ferry. (See Doc. 62.) Defendant Hirewell answered the FAC on June 8, 2026. (Doc. 63.)

Annie Actor also pretended to be associated with Defendant Hirewell in communications with Plaintiff. (Id. ¶ 20.) Plaintiff concedes: "Annie Actor's use of two distinct corporate identities (Randstad on April 13, 2024 and Hirewell on April 15, 2024) within a 48-hour period . . . establishes that the Fraudulent Actors were operating a coordinated enterprise that systematically misappropriated the brand identities of multiple legitimate recruiting firms, including Defendants, as instrumentalities of the scheme." (Id. ¶ 21 (emphasis added).)

In other words, Plaintiff's own allegations establish that a group of unknown third-party scammers worked in concert to trick him into transferring money to them, and that, apart from the scammers' fraudulent use of the "Randstad" name, Randstad had no involvement in the scheme and had no association with the scammers. (Id. ¶¶ 11–36.) Indeed, Plaintiff further admits that Randstad's only "acts and omissions" with respect to this case involve (1) maintaining a "nationally recognized brand identit[y] synonymous with legitimate recruiting services"; (2) maintaining verified LinkedIn corporate pages; (3) allowing recruiters to list Randstad as their employer on LinkedIn; (4) conducting legitimate recruiting through unsolicited outreach; (5) operating "specialized vertical divisions" like "Randstad Life Sciences" that happen to align with "employment categories used by the Fraudulent Actors"; and (6) failing to maintain a candidate-accessible verification system to confirm scammer identities. (Id. ¶¶ 34–35.) Put another way, Plaintiff alleges that Randstad's only wrongdoing in this case is operating a "nationally recognized" recruiting firm that is "synonymous with legitimate recruiting services" and susceptible to impersonation. (See id.)

Based on these allegations, Plaintiff asserts the following claims: (1) Wire Fraud (id. ¶¶ 37–42); (2) Civil RICO (id. ¶¶ 43–47); (3) RICO Conspiracy (id. ¶¶ 49–51); (4) Unregistered Securities Solicitation (id. ¶¶ 52–55); (5) Common Law Fraud (id. ¶¶ 56–59); (6) Negligent Supervision of Brand Protection (id. ¶¶ 60–64); (7) Civil Conspiracy (id. ¶¶ 65–67); and (8) Unfair Competition (id. ¶¶ 68–71). He also makes reference to additional claims on the cover page of his FAC, including "Access Device

Fraud," "Money Laundering," "Pig-Butchering Emotional Manipulation and Economic Devastation After Intervention," and "Misrepresentation of Job Opportunity." (Id. at 1.)

On August 21, 2026, Randstad filed its answer to the FAC, closing the pleadings, and this motion now follows.

III. LEGAL STANDARD FOR MOTION FOR JUDGMENT ON THE PLEADINGS

Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 12(c) provides that, "[a]fter the pleadings are closed—but early enough not to delay trial—a party may move for judgment on the pleadings." Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(c). The pleadings are closed for purposes of Rule 12(c) once a complaint and answer have been filed, assuming no counterclaim or cross-claim is made. Doe v. United States, 419 F.3d 1058, 1061 (9th Cir. 2005). A Rule 12(c) motion for judgment on the pleadings is "functionally identical" to a motion to dismiss under Rule 12(b)(6), and the same standard of review applies to motions brought under either provision. Cafasso, U.S. ex rel. v. Gen. Dynamics C4 Sys., Inc., 637 F.3d 1047, 1054 n.4 (9th Cir. 2011). On a Rule 12(c) motion, a court is "not bound to accept as true a legal conclusion couched as a factual allegation." Ashcroft v. Iqbal, 556 U.S. 662, 678 (2009) (quoting Bell Atl. Corp. v. Twombly, 550 U.S. 544, 555 (2007)). "Nor does a complaint suffice if it tenders 'naked assertion[s]' devoid of 'further factual enhancement.'" Id. (quoting Twombly, 550 U.S. at 557). A complaint must "state a claim to relief that is plausible on its face." Twombly, 550 U.S. at 570. This means that the complaint must plead "factual content that allows the court to draw the reasonable inference that the defendant is liable for the misconduct alleged." Iqbal, 556 U.S. at 678. There must be "sufficient allegations of underlying facts to give fair notice and to enable the opposing party to defend itself effectively . . . and factual allegations that are taken as true must plausibly suggest an entitlement to relief, such that it is not unfair to require the opposing party to be subjected to the expense of discovery and continued litigation." Starr v. Baca, 652 F.3d 1202, 1216 (9th Cir.

2011). Ruling on a motion for judgment on the pleadings will be a "context-specific task that requires the reviewing court to draw on its judicial experience and common sense. But where the well-pleaded facts do not permit the court to infer more than the mere possibility of misconduct, the complaint has alleged – but it has not 'show[n]' – 'that the pleader is entitled to relief.'" Iqbal, 556 U.S. at 679 (quoting Fed. R. Civ. P. 8(a)(2)). Because Rule 12(c) is governed by the same standard, this plausibility requirement applies with equal force here, and claims sounding in fraud must, in addition to satisfying Rule 9(b)'s particularity requirement, plead plausible allegations. Cafasso, 637 F.3d at 1054–55. Where these standards are not met on the face of the pleadings, judgment on the pleadings is warranted.[2]

IV. ARGUMENTS AND AUTHORITIES

A. Plaintiff's Conspiracy and Fraud Claims Fail.

This section addresses the following related causes of action: Plaintiff's First (Wire Fraud)[3], Second (Civil RICO), Third (RICO Conspiracy), Fifth (Common Law Fraud), and Seventh (Civil Conspiracy) causes of action. In all these claims, Plaintiff alleges wrongdoing by the "Fraudulent Actors," and attempts to ascribe liability to Randstad merely because the Fraudulent Actors "invok[ed]" Randstad's name in the course of their deceit, which he contends somehow gave the fraudsters "apparent

[2] The defense that a complaint fails to state a claim is not waived by filing an answer and is expressly preserved for a motion under Rule 12(c). See Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(h)(2). In resolving this motion, the Court looks only to the four corners of the FAC and to matters subject to judicial notice—including this Court's prior order dismissing Plaintiff's original complaint (Doc. 60)—and Randstad relies on no matter outside the pleadings.

[3] To the extent Plaintiff intended to assert a standalone claim under the federal wire fraud statute, he fails to state a claim because there is no private right of action under that statute. Bennett v. Juarez, No. 2:25-CV-00930-AH (JDEX), 2025 WL 806382, at *3 (C.D. Cal. Feb. 25, 2025) (Plaintiff's claims for mail fraud and wire fraud, 18 U.S.C. §§ 1341, 1343, are even less likely to succeed on the merits as Congress did not provide a private right of action for either criminal statute.").

authority" to act on behalf of Randstad. (See, e.g., Doc. 62 ¶¶ 38, 41, 45, 51, 57, 66.) He also alleges that Randstad should have disclosed "the foreseeability of impersonation" or, in other words, Randstad should have somehow intervened to save Plaintiff from a scheme that it did not know was happening. (See id. ¶ 58.)

These causes of action, which represent the gravamen of Plaintiff's FAC, fail for several independent reasons. First and foremost, as a factual matter, these claims fail for the simple reason that Plaintiff has admitted that the Fraudulent Actors and Annie Actor "misappropriated" Randstad's brand identity in furtherance of their scheme, and that Annie Actor "was not employed by, contracted with, or otherwise authorized to represent Randstad." (Doc. 62 ¶ 15.) Notably absent from the FAC is any allegation that Randstad knew about, coordinated with, controlled, or was otherwise involved in the conduct of the scammers. (See generally Doc. 62.) For this simple reason alone, Plaintiff's claims fail. See Kidron v. Movie Acquisition Corp., 40 Cal. App. 4th 1571, 1582 (1995) ("Knowledge of the planned tort must be combined with intent to aid in its commission."); Reves v. Ernst & Young, 507 U.S. 170, 183 (1993) (to state a claim, Plaintiff must show how Randstad "participate[d] in the operation or management of the enterprise."). Thus, Plaintiff's allegations affirmatively negate his claims against Randstad and entitle Randstad to judgment on the pleadings. See Twombly, 550 U.S. at 570 (A complaint must "state a claim to relief that is plausible on its face.").

Second, Plaintiff's RICO claims are also fatally defective as a matter of law. There is no requisite "pattern of racketeering activity" by Randstad because no two predicate acts are attributed to Randstad. See H.J. Inc. v. Nw. Bell Tel. Co., 492 U.S. 229, 237–39 (1989) (a "pattern of racketeering activity" requires at least two racketeering predicates that are related, and that amount to or pose a threat of continued criminal activity); 18 U.S.C. § 1961(5). Plaintiff further does not allege that any act of Randstad was the direct or proximate cause of his injuries; to the contrary, the FAC's allegations establish that Plaintiff's losses flowed directly from the Fraudulent Actors' conduct, and not from anything Randstad did. See Holmes v. Sec. Inv. Prot. Corp., 503 U.S. 258, 268 (1992) (civil RICO requires "some direct relation between the injury asserted and the injurious conduct alleged"); see also Anza v. Ideal Steel Supply Corp., 547 U.S. 451, 457–61 (2006) (RICO plaintiff must show the alleged violation was the direct cause of the injury).

Plaintiff's RICO claims fail for two additional, independent reasons. A claim under 18 U.S.C. § 1962(c) requires two distinct entities—a RICO "person" and a separate "enterprise" whose affairs that person conducts. Cedric Kushner Promotions, Ltd. v. King, 533 U.S. 158, 161 (2001). Here, the FAC defines the "enterprise" as the "Recruiter-Impersonation Enterprise" composed of the Fraudulent Actors themselves (Doc. 62 ¶¶ 32, 44), and nowhere alleges that Randstad is a member of, or conducts the affairs of, that enterprise. Randstad is therefore neither the RICO "person" nor a participant in the enterprise, and the claim fails on the pleadings. Moreover, the Ninth Circuit does not permit a defendant to be held vicariously liable under RICO for predicate acts committed by outsiders it neither employed nor controlled. Respondeat superior applies under RICO only where the defendant is distinct from the enterprise and "benefitted from its employee's RICO violation" committed within the course and scope of employment. Oki Semiconductor Co. v. Wells Fargo Bank, N.A., 298 F.3d 768, 776 (9th Cir. 2002); Brady v. Dairy Fresh Prods. Co., 974 F.2d 1149, 1154 (9th Cir. 1992). The court expressly "decline[d]" to hold an employer "strictly liable for the conduct of its employees' RICO co-conspirators," because an employer "reaps no benefits from non-employee RICO conspirators, and it cannot monitor their activities." Oki, 298 F.3d at 776. Plaintiff's theory is weaker still: the Fraudulent Actors were not Randstad's employees or agents at all, but strangers who impersonated it. Plaintiff's RICO conspiracy claim under Section 1962(d) fails for the same reasons, because it requires an agreement to violate RICO that the FAC nowhere alleges Randstad made. See 18 U.S.C. § 1962(d); Oki, 298 F.3d at 774–75.

Third, and relatedly, Plaintiff's allegations against Randstad with respect to these causes of action are not pleaded with particularity. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 9(b) ("In alleging fraud or mistake, a party must state with particularity the circumstances constituting fraud or mistake."); Edwards v. Marin Park, Inc., 356 F. 3d 1058, 1065-66 (9th Cir. 2004) (applying Rule 9(b) to RICO claims); In re WellPoint, Inc. Out-of-Network UCR Rates Litig., 865 F. Supp. 2d 1002, 1036 (C.D. Cal. 2011) ("Although RICO itself is not subject to . . . heightened pleading standards, predicate acts alleging fraud must be pleaded with particularity."). Here, Plaintiff describes the Fraudulent Actors' scheme and the events that occurred as a result, but his FAC is bereft of any detail explaining how Randstad knew about the scheme, when it became aware of the scheme, and how it supposedly participated in or ratified the Fraudulent Actors' conduct. See id. Instead, Plaintiff lumps Randstad and Hirewell together and makes conclusory allegations that Defendants should be held liable under "principles of apparent authority and ratification" without further detail. (See, e.g., Doc. 62 at 41); In re Toyota Motor Corp. Unintended Acceleration Mktg., Sales Practices & Prod. Liab. Litig., 826 F. Supp. 2d 1180, 1201 (C.D. Cal. 2011) ("A plaintiff may not simply lump together multiple defendants without specifying the role of each defendant in the fraud."); Swartz v. KPMG LLP, 476 F.3d 756, 764–65 (9th Cir. 2007) (Rule 9(b) "does not allow a complaint to merely lump multiple defendants together but require[s] plaintiffs to differentiate their allegations . . . and inform each defendant separately of the allegations surrounding [its] alleged participation in the fraud" (quotation marks omitted)).

Finally, Plaintiff's conclusory "apparent authority," "ratification," and "constructive fraud" allegations against Randstad fail. With respect to "apparent authority," Plaintiff has not alleged that Randstad took any affirmative acts, beyond simply existing as a large company with a brand "synonymous with legitimate recruiting services," that could have led Plaintiff to reasonably believe the scammers were its authorized agents. See Hawaiian Paradise Park Corp. v. Friendly Broad. Co., 414 F.2d 750, 756 (9th Cir. 1969) (Apparent authority exists when "the principal does something or permits the agent to do something which reasonably leads another to believe that the agent had the authority he purported to have." (emphasis added)). Apparent authority flows only from the principal's own manifestations; it "cannot be established merely by showing that [the agent] claimed authority or purported to exercise it, but must be established by proof of something said or done by the [principal] on which [the third party] reasonably relied." N.L.R.B. v. Dist. Council of Iron Workers, 124 F.3d 1094, 1098–99 (9th Cir. 1997). California law is the same: ostensible authority "cannot be based solely upon the agent's conduct" and must be "generated by some act or neglect of the principal sought to be charged," Kaplan v. Coldwell Banker Residential Affiliates, Inc., 59 Cal. App. 4th 741, 747 (1997); see Cal. Civ. Code §§ 2300, 2317, and a party "dealing with an assumed agent [is] bound at [his] peril to ascertain the extent of the agent's authority," van't Rood v. County of Santa Clara, 113 Cal. App. 4th 549, 571 (2003); see Cal. Civ. Code § 2334. Every "manifestation" the FAC identifies—Randstad's brand recognition, its verified LinkedIn pages, its use of unsolicited outreach, and the absence of a candidate-verification system (Doc. 62 ¶¶ 34–35)—is either the impersonators' own conduct or the mere fact of Randstad's existence, not any act by Randstad holding the Fraudulent Actors out as its agents. Nor does Randstad's status as a recognized brand supply the missing manifestation: the cases finding a triable issue on brand-based reliance involved a principal that affirmatively held out its actual agent (for example, by authorizing use of the word "member"), and even then the court cautioned that its holding does not make large firms "routinely fair game." Kaplan, 59 Cal. App. 4th at 748. Randstad made no such holding-out here. To the contrary, Plaintiff admits that Annie Actor was not "authorized to represent Randstad." (Doc. 62 ¶ 15.) Without alleging some affirmative action or manifestation by Randstad, Plaintiff's apparent authority claim is dead on arrival. See id.

With respect to ratification, Plaintiff has not alleged whether Randstad ever became aware of this particular scheme against Plaintiff (other than via this lawsuit), so his ratification theory must fail. See Henderson v. United Student Aid Funds, Inc., 918 F.3d 1068, 1075 (9th Cir. 2019), as amended on denial of reh'g and reh'g en banc (May 6, 2019) (explaining that ratification theory only viable when "principal knows of the material facts involved in the act it is ratifying").

With respect to "constructive fraud" and related arguments, Plaintiff has not identified any legal duty that Randstad owed to him, nor that Randstad was aware of the scheme when it supposedly breached that duty. Assilzadeh v. California Fed. Bank, 82 Cal. App. 4th 399, 415 (2000) ("Constructive fraud is a unique species of fraud applicable only to a fiduciary or confidential relationship."). Indeed, Randstad had no relationship with Plaintiff whatsoever, fiduciary or otherwise, as his allegations reveal. See id. Thus, Randstad is entitled to judgment on the pleadings on all of Plaintiff's claims.

B. Plaintiff's Remaining Claims Fail.

Plaintiff's remaining causes of action also fail for the reasons described above—i.e., Plaintiff concedes that Randstad was not involved or aware of the scheme, and he has not made any plausible or particular allegations concerning Randstad's involvement in the Fraudulent Actors' wrongdoing. His claims also fail for the following independent reasons:

- "Unregistered Securities Solicitation" (Fourth Cause of Action). Under California Corporations Code: "Section 25401 makes it illegal to offer or sell a security in this state or buy or offer to buy a security in this state by means of any written or oral communication which includes an untrue statement of a material fact or omits to state a material fact necessary in order to make the statements made, in the light of the circumstances under which they were made, not misleading." Moss v. Kroner, 197 Cal. App. 4th 860, 872–73, 129 Cal. Rptr. 3d 220, 227 (2011) (cleaned up). Section 25501, in turn, creates a cause of action for rescission or damages for a violation of Section 25401. Id. Here, Plaintiff has failed to allege that Randstad offered or sold any security, engaged in any written or oral communication with Plaintiff, or made any false or misleading statements to Plaintiff. See id. Primary liability under Sections 25401 and 25501 is limited to the actual seller in privity with the plaintiff; Section 25501 imposes liability only to "the person who purchases a security from" the violator. Apollo Capital Fund, LLC v. Roth Capital Partners, LLC, 158 Cal. App. 4th 226, 252 (2007). Plaintiff does not allege that he purchased any security from Randstad, so Randstad cannot be a primary violator. Nor can Plaintiff reach Randstad through the secondary-liability provisions, which apply only to enumerated actors—controlling persons, officers, directors, or agents and broker-dealers who materially aid the violation, or those who materially assist with intent to defraud—and which in any event presuppose a primary violation by a seller in privity with Plaintiff. Cal. Corp. Code §§ 25504, 25504.1; Moss, 197 Cal. App. 4th at 874–75. The FAC places Randstad in none of these roles. Further, as noted above, Plaintiff's FAC is bereft of any details connecting Randstad to the scammers or establishing agency, authorization, ratification, or participation by Randstad in the alleged fraud. Thus, his claim under California law must fail.

- "Negligent Supervision and Brand Protection" (Sixth Cause of Action). In this claim, Plaintiff essentially argues that Randstad owed a duty to the public to protect everyone from job scams. (See Doc. 62 ¶¶ 61–63.) He generally argues that Randstad should have warned him (and the public at large) that scammers may impersonate it. (Id.) Even assuming arguendo that Randstad does not publicly warn about job scams, Plaintiff's claim is based on a legal "duty" to "the public" that does not exist in the law. Whether a defendant owes a duty to protect a plaintiff from a third party's conduct turns on a two-step inquiry: the plaintiff must first establish a special relationship or other circumstance giving rise to an affirmative duty to protect, and only then do the Rowland factors apply. Brown v. USA Taekwondo, 11 Cal. 5th 204, 214–15 (2021). As a general rule, "one owes no duty to control the conduct of another, nor to warn those endangered by such conduct," Regents of the Univ. of Cal. v. Superior Court, 4 Cal. 5th 607, 619 (2018), and a special relationship "create[s] a duty of care owed to a limited community, not the public at large," id. at 621. Randstad had no special relationship with Plaintiff, who was a member of the public, or with the Fraudulent Actors, whom it could not control—as Plaintiff's own allegations confirm. Absent such a relationship, foreseeability alone cannot manufacture a duty, because the Rowland factors "do not serve as an alternative basis for imposing duties to protect." Brown, 11 Cal. 5th at 222. This claim therefore fails.

- "Unfair Competition" (Eighth Cause of Action). This claim is entirely derivative of the other claims and fails, entitling Randstad to judgment on the pleadings, for all the reasons discussed above. Independently, the claim fails because the UCL affords only restitution and injunctive relief, and Plaintiff cannot obtain restitution from Randstad, which never received any money or property from him—his funds went to the Fraudulent Actors and their platforms.
- "Access Device Fraud," "Money Laundering," "Pig-Butchering Emotional Manipulation and Economic Devastation After Intervention," and "Misrepresentation of Job Opportunity" (Unpled Claims on FAC Cover Page). Because Plaintiff did not include these claims in the body of his FAC, nor did he identify which allegations correspond to such claims, the Court should dismiss or refuse to recognize these claims. See Williams v. Lobel Fin. Corp., 673 F. Supp. 3d 1101, 1106 (C.D. Cal. 2023) (only analyzing claims listed "in the Complaint's body" despite "plaintiff list[ing] 61 claims on the cover pages of his Complaint."); Gonzalez v. Santa Clara Cnty., 793 F. Supp. 3d 1093, 1104 (N.D. Cal. 2025) (similar). Further, several of these claims are based on criminal statutes for which no private civil right of action exists. See, e.g., 18 U.S.C. §§ 1029, 1956, 1957; Cal. Penal Code § 532. To the extent Plaintiff could have asserted causes of action under these statutes and theories, his claims would still fail to state a claim for all the reasons described above including, most notably, Plaintiff's own admission that Randstad is a legitimate recruiting firm that was not involved in or aware of the Fraudulent Actors' scam.

C. Judgment Should Be Entered Without Leave To Amend.

The Court has already dismissed Plaintiff's complaint once and given him leave to file the instant FAC. (Doc. 60.) For the reasons described above, his FAC still fails to state a claim, and allowing him to amend it yet again would be futile. Amendment cannot cure the defects here because they arise from Plaintiff's own judicial admissions—that the Fraudulent Actors were never authorized to represent Randstad and merely misappropriated its name—which no repleading can retract, and from legal deficiencies in his theories of duty and vicarious liability that no additional facts can overcome. A court granting judgment on the pleadings under Rule 12(c) has discretion to enter judgment without leave to amend, and that discretion "is particularly broad where plaintiff has previously amended the complaint." Cafasso, 637 F.3d at 1058; see Allen v. City of Beverly Hills, 911 F.2d 367, 373 (9th Cir. 1990) ("The district court's discretion to deny leave to amend is particularly broad where plaintiff has previously amended the complaint."). Therefore, this motion should be granted and judgment entered without leave to amend.

V. CONCLUSION

For the foregoing reasons, Defendants Randstad US, LLC and Randstad North America, Inc. respectfully request that the Court grant this motion for judgment on the pleadings and enter judgment in Randstad's favor on Plaintiff's First Amended Complaint against Randstad in its entirety and with prejudice, without further opportunity to amend.

DECLARATION OF NATHAN D. CHAPMAN

I, Nathan Chapman, declare as follows:

1. I am a Partner at Kabat, Chapman, & Ozmer LLP, and counsel of record for Defendants Randstad US, LLC and Randstad North America, Inc. (collectively, "Randstad") in connection with this matter. The facts set forth herein are of my own personal knowledge and if sworn I could and would testify competently hereto.

2. On October 27, 2025, my office met and conferred with the pro se Plaintiff by phone regarding Randstad's intent to seek dismissal of Plaintiff's Complaint. The Parties thoroughly discussed the substance and potential resolution of Randstad's contemplated motion. My office informed Plaintiff that all of the causes of action pled in the Complaint were insufficiently pled against Randstad, particularly because Plaintiff had admitted in his allegations that Randstad was not involved in the scam at the heart of his complaint. Plaintiff disagreed with my office's assessment of the Complaint. No resolution could be reached.

3. The Defendants subsequently removed the case, and co-defendant Korn Ferry moved to dismiss the complaint, which motion Randstad joined. (Docs. 1, 3, 14, 30.) After an in-person hearing, the Court granted the motion to dismiss and gave Plaintiff leave to amend. (Doc. 60.)

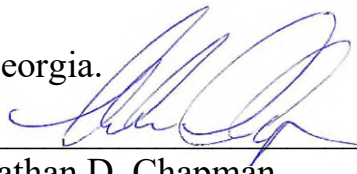

4. Following the Court's hearing, the Parties conferred again via email on May 18, 2026, and Randstad again emphasized that Plaintiff had admitted that he was wronged by third-party criminal actors having no affiliation with Randstad, and asked Plaintiff to drop Randstad from the lawsuit. Plaintiff refused.

5. On August 12, 2026—nine days before the filing of this motion—my office met with Mr. Ventura for approximately 30 minutes via Teams videoconference. Among other topics, the Parties discussed in detail this planned motion brought pursuant to Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 12(c). My office explained that the motion would be based on largely similar grounds as our recent Rule 12(b)(6) motion (Doc. 64)—most notably that Plaintiff's FAC admits that Randstad was not affiliated with the scam at issue. The Parties thoroughly discussed potential resolution of the motion without Court intervention. After a lengthy discussion, Plaintiff confirmed that he (1) opposes the motion; and (2) believes the Parties have adequately conferred regarding the same.

I declare under penalty of perjury under the laws of the state of California that the foregoing is true and correct.

Executed August 21, 2026, at Atlanta, Georgia.
