The total price for your Package Intercept is an estimate based on the weight, dimensions, and mail class of your package. The actual postage is determined after your package arrives at your local Post Office™ facility and is weighed and rated.

USPS® does not charge your credit card until the package's actual postage is determined. USPS only charges your credit card if the actual postage is equal to or less than the estimated postage.

If the actual postage is more than the estimated postage, USPS will notify you by email or text and you must pay the entire actual postage price with cash, check, or money order when your package arrives.

Example: If your estimated postage is $11.50 but the actual postage is $13.50, you must pay the carrier the entire $13.50 with cash, check, or money order when your package arrives.
